'We surveyed women in the United States, United Kingdom, China, Hong Kong, Singapore, and India with personal income of at least $100,000 or investable assets of $500,000 or more. Our findings indicate that women investors in Asia are in many ways ahead of their counterparts in the U.S. We see this especially in women's levels of confidence and engagement, their degree of risk tolerance, and the level of diversity in the financial services industry across the region.'

Women in Asia Are More Financially Savvy than Women in the U.S.

And they're shaping the future of the wealth management industry.

'It would seem ridiculous to limit this incredible plenty to a few people. When the world gets rich enough, a trivial tax on the rich would be enough to provide everyone on Earth with a #basicincome that would allow them to lead lives of leisure. Or, as Yglesias suggests, voluntary giveaways by the rich could support the rest, since we might get more altruistic as our lives become more comfortable. ....This is the basic "Star Trek" future. But actually, I think that the future has a far more radical transformation in store for us. I predict that technological advances will actually end economics as we know it, and destroy scarcity, by changing the nature of human desire.'

A 'Star Trek' economy: Do we want an economic utopia?

There's one big, obvious thing missing from the future society depicted in "Star Trek": No one is doing business. There is almost no one buying and selling, except for a few species for whom commerce is a form of traditional religion. Food and luxuries...

Banish the demons to Maynilad Purgatorium! #exorcism #Philippines

Help Wanted: The Philippines Needs More Exorcists

The Office of Exorcism reports a sharp increase in cases over the past decade — more than its five-man team can handle. Warning: It's a high-stress job. The priests believe the demons strike back.
